Heap big Savings! Yes, the next time you're ready to buy car insurance, (1) check State Farm's famous low rates—rates so low that careful drivers may save $10...$20...$30... even more. And (2) check State Farm service—so outstanding that people insure more cars with us than with anyone else. (Isn't this what you want? The car insurance known for both big service and big savings?)

as we see it

■ It was half time during a telecast of the basketball game between the University of Wichita and St. Louis University. Viewers in St. Louis, Tulsa, Dallas, Peoria, Cincinnati and Des Moines (Wichita was blacked out) looked at their screens in amazement.

There before their eyes were paraded views of paintings, prints, sculpture and pottery created by graduate students of the University of Wichita School of Fine Arts. For six minutes, while the athletes regained their breath in the locker rooms, the folks at home examined paintings such as "Man Carrying Golden Pig" by James Davis, and sculpture such as "Watusi Warrior" by Bill Lloyd. Then back to the whistle ball game.

■ It was a fascinating experiment, one the National Collegiate Athletic Association might ponder as soon as it finishes counting the television money coming in for next season's football games. The NCAA lads seem content with the routine football half-time shows—sharply clad bandsmen shaping their parades on the field and mostly unclad baton twirlers parading their shapes on the field. Perhaps next season there might be experiments showing what else goes on at our institutes of higher learning. Most big schools have television facilities of some sort and they could compete in presenting unique half-time shows.

This experimenting needn't be confined to collegiate sports. Can't you just see Lennie Bernstein conducting the New York Philharmonic in a half-time concert at a New York Giants-Philadelphia Eagles game? Or a couple of Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo stars executing a pas de deux while Arnie Palmer and Jack Nicklaus are striding toward the 17th hole at the U.S. Open? ■ By the way, Wichita won the basketball game, 86-71.

TV TELETYPE*: HOLLYWOOD: WALT ANDERSON REPORTS:

CBS's plan to boost ratings of the six-year-old Rawhide with liberal use of big-name guest stars and "anthology-type" scripts caused dissension among the brass. Executive producer VINCENT FENNELLY and associate producer PAUL KING resigned in protest. Replacements: BERNARD KOWALSKI and BRUCE GELLER.

STEVE ALLEN becomes a transcontinental commuter this fall when he replaces GARRY MOORE as host of I've Got a Secret. The weekly panel show will continue originating from New York, and ALLEN's syndicated nightly show continues from here . . . A lovely bevy of girls has been signed for a Burke's Law segment titled "Who Killed the 11th Best-Dressed Woman in the World?"—MARTHA HYER, JEANNE CRAIN, HAZEL COURT, JOANNE DRU and SUSAN STRASBERG.

GARY LOCKWOOD, so far a peacetime Marine in The Lieutenant, gets his first taste of real action in the series on April 18. The episode, entitled "To Kill a Man," is a Vietnam battle story. LEW GALLO and JAMES SHIGETA are guest stars . . . In an upcoming Breaking Point titled "My Hands Are Clean," TELLY SAVALAS is a greedy moneylender who develops stigmata.

JACK PALANCE joins the ranks of TV-stars-who-also-direct with "You're All Right, Ivy" on his Greatest Show on Earth series. He'll be working with a formidable trio of guest performers: BUSTER KEATON, JOE E. BROWN and JOAN BLONDELL . . . JEANETTE NOLAN signed for a Combat!—"Infant of Prague."

JIM BACKUS, who'll have two series on TV next season (Mr. Magoo and Gilligan's Island), appears as a Texas oil millionaire in "Birds of a Feather" on Arrest and Trial. MALA POWERS, MACDONALD CAREY and CHRIS ROBINSON guest on another Arrest and Trial segment, "Those Which Love Has Made."

WALTER BRENNAN, formerly of The Real McCoys and set for The Walter Brennan Show next season on ABC, will narrate a Project 20 color special about patriotism called "The Red, White and Blue." Scheduled to air June 9, it is being written by PHILIP REISMAN JR., who scripted the 1961 special "The Real West" . . . Actress LILIA SKALA, Oscar-nominated for her role in the movie "Lilies of the Field," has been added to the cast of "Death Wish" on Kraft Suspense Theatre.

WHY SPEECH ON TELEVISION IS NOT REALLY FREE

An ambiguous Government regulation, and broadcasters' cautious interpretation of it,
are giving the American television viewer an incomplete—and perhaps dangerously distorted—
picture of his world

BY EDITH EFRON

At a recent Congressional hearing, a Socialist arose and denounced the suppression of left-wing political views on the publicly owned air waves.

Pointing out acidly that "Abraham Lincoln, in the campaign of 1860, represented a minority political viewpoint," Aaron Orange, spokesman for the 74-year-old Socialist Labor Party, said: "We agree with Justice Hugo Black who stated, ' . . . There is no progress possible anywhere where the differences of people are stifled, their voices are not able to be heard, and where they all speak as one voice. . . .'

"It is simple logic that creating the opportunity for a wider presentation of one view, while at the same time suppressing . . . the expression of all other divergent views, is the very antithesis of democracy. . . ."

At another recent Congressional hearing, a conservative rose and similarly denounced the suppression of right-wing political views on the publicly owned air waves. Congressman Durward Hall (R., Mo.) attacked the "one-sided editorializing" that goes on in all three networks "in the guise of public-affairs shows." He said: "If there were signs of diversity, I would not be so concerned. But one does not hear or see one network show today which seems to be 'liberal-oriented' and one tomorrow which seems to be 'conservative-oriented.' They all fall into the 'liberal' category."

In the last two years, a strange new phenomenon has emerged: the battle by large groups, both right and left of center, for access to the publicly owned air waves.

Not only do these groups charge that their views are excluded from the air waves, they also charge that they are frequently subject to ideological attack on the air, without the opportunity to defend themselves.

This cry from far-flung points of the political spectrum that free speech is being inhibited by broadcasters in general—and by the networks in particular—is the latest and most disturbing development in the history of America's only Government-regulated communications medium.

And there can be no question but that a specific Government regulation lies at the root of the trouble. Its name is: the "Fairness Doctrine." It lays down the principles to which broadcasting news and public-affairs departments must conform. And, paradoxically, the spokesmen for the left and the right are simultaneously blaming it for the suppression of their views and invoking it for protection. To understand the paradox, one must understand the Fairness Doctrine.

This doctrine is a modification by the Federal Communications Commission of its own 1941 ruling known as the "Mayflower Decision." This historic decision forbade broadcasters to express their own thoughts on controversial issues, and had the peculiar effect of abolishing almost all controversial thought from television. In 1949, the Fairness Doctrine was developed to rectify this situation. It granted the broadcaster the right to express his views—provided he also sought out and presented "all sides of controversial issues." This presentation of "all sides" was to be "fair," "non-distorted," "nonpartisan," "non-one-sided," "equal," "equally forceful."*

Officially, the Fairness Doctrine is intended to be the guardian of diversity of thought on the publicly owned air waves; and its various provisions are intended to solve the age-old journalistic problem of "impartiality" versus "slanting"—concealed or "covert" editorializing.

Unfortunately, "slanting" is strangely difficult to pin down. Said FCC Chairman E. William Henry: "Overt editorializing presents little problem . . . but editorializing may take other less-identifiable forms. . . . continued

*This 'equality' is not the same as 'equal time.' Strict equality of time applies only to free broadcast time given to political candidates during a campaign.

It is very, very difficult to draw the line as to what is editorializing."

And Congressman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) commented further: "We get into the problem of deciding whether a news analysis is editorializing when it is slanted. . . . Who is going to decide? Isn't it largely how we might feel as individuals toward a particular news report?"

With this question, Mr. Harris isolates the central—and unresolved—dilemma of the Fairness Doctrine. In any given news report or documentary on a controversial issue, a treatment that seems eminently "fair," "impartial" or "objective" to one viewer, may seem eminently "unfair," "slanted" and "biased" to another. The truth is that the Fairness Doctrine contains a set of noble abstractions to which most would subscribe in principle—but upon which no two appear to agree in practical application.

It is, in consequence, one of the most unintelligible regulations governing the broadcasting industry.

At the recent "editorializing" hearings, one broadcaster, Clarence Jones, president of WQIZ, St. George, S.C., blurted out: "Just what is the standard of fairness? Who knows? I don't understand it. I don't know what it requires me to do. I wish I did."

Given the confusion that reigns over the issue of "fairness" or "objectivity," how do the networks approach the problem?

Curiously enough, both CBS and ABC profess to find it marvelously simple. In a host of policy statements they have blandly laid claim to total "fairness." They contend that "fairness" or "objectivity" consists of ordering their staffs to report on events in news programs and interpret events "in depth" in documentaries without any reference to, or expression of, their own opinions.

James Hagerty of ABC, while still news chief, stated ABC policy thus: "We're trying to be objective. We present both sides fairly. We are reporters. We get interpretations from other people and present them. If anyone on this network is expressing his own opinion—well, if I catch him, I won't permit it."

(Elmer Lower, his successor, confirms this policy and amplifies: "Our aim is to present news accurately, fairly and with balance. As networks, ABC Radio and ABC Television do not present opinion.")

And Richard Salant, while news chief of CBS, said, "We believe in objective coverage. Our reporters do not cover stories from their points of view. They are presenting them from nobody's point of view." (Fred Friendly, Salant's successor, adds: "We do not inflict our personal opinions on the public.")

This is not the position taken by NBC, which lays no claim to offering the public an opinion-sterile product. "We feel," says NBC

News chief William McAndrew, that news events require interpretation to give them reality. We offer our staff men a wide latitude of interpretation."

There is reason to suppose that on this matter NBC is closest to accepting reality. The claim that "no-opinion" journalism can exist is dubious. Indeed, it is branded an outright myth by some of the most responsible men in the business.

News, they say, is always a form of editorializing. Quincy Howe, a former president of the Association of Radio-Television News Analysts, says: "All news presented on radio and TV editorializes. The newscaster editorializes in what he emphasizes and what he plays down, in what he omits and in what he includes." David Brinkley is in agreement. "News," he says, "is what I say it is. It's something worth knowing by my standards."

Documentaries, too, say expert communications men, are carriers of a dominant point of view. A documentary, they point out, is far more than a filmed debate by two teams of men with opposing ideas about a problem. It is the producer's interpretation of that problem and of the controversy itself: This interpretation is guided solely by the producer's opinions. And these opinions are controversial—as the storms of protest in the Massachusetts Legislature over CBS's "Biography of a Bookie Joint," and the anger among conservative congressmen over NBC's "The Battle of Newburgh" amply attest.

The documentary, say its producers, is necessarily a form of editorializing. Says John Secondari of ABC: "It is absolutely impossible to write, broadcast, or put together pictures without having a point of view." Says Gerald Green, who produces documentaries for NBC: "It is impossible not to have a point of view. Once you start selecting facts and choosing what and whom to put on the air, a point of view is implicit." Says Don Hewitt of CBS:

"Of course, the 'in-depth' news documentaries do take a point of view. . . . It has to be understood that personality has to come through."

This all adds up to the plain fact that the allegedly impartial air waves are awash with unidentified editorial opinion. Yet this situation is not precisely the networks' fault. The truth is that the networks, like all broadcasters, are in the grip of an impossible dilemma: They are bounded on one side by the fact that it is impossible for a human being to combine words or pictures without smuggling in value judgments—and they are bounded on the other by a Fairness Doctrine which demands an indefinable "impartiality" in news and public-affairs programming.

How have they resolved the conflict? Their solution, official statements notwithstanding, is an unhappy one. It consists simply of making sure that newscasters and documentary producers conform as closely as possible to a safe, middle-of-the-road point of view.

Dominant network opinion is thus described:

"It's conformist," says ABC's Howard K. Smith. "As compared to the other media, TV is by far the most colorless, the most cowardly."

"The prevailing opinion of this network, I'd say, is moderate," says NBC News chief McAndrew. "We have the political spectrum interpreted by moderates. Rightists call us liberal, labor people say we're in the middle."

"The networks are in the hands of corporations which see the world the same way—as moderate liberals," says CBS's Hewitt.

'News is what I say it is. It's something worth knowing by my standards.'—David Brinkley, newscaster says: "I'd say the prevailing network opinion is middle-of-the-road. Of course this middle position isn't no position. It's a position. Whatever it is, so far as the Fairness Doctrine is concerned, it's well within it."

It seems clear that a definite political point of view prevails on network broadcasting. Whether one calls this view "moderate," "middle-of-the-road" or "moderate liberalism," it is the unidentified political filter through which the viewer is permitted to view the affairs of this Nation.

And yet, as Mr. Henry says, the middle position is a position, it is not no position. What's more, it is not the only position in America, and may well not be the majority position. The political middle is just what its name indicates—it is the middle band of the U.S. political spectrum, and it does not reflect the views of millions of Americans who represent a vast reservoir of diversified political opinion, both left and right of center, not to be confused with the Communists, racists or religious fanatics at the far fringes of the spectrum.

Spokesmen for these millions have come to feel that they are being actively deprived of an "equal" and "equally forceful" voice on the publicly owned air waves. They do not wish to be examined, interpreted and seen exclusively through "moderate" eyes; they wish to do their own examining, interpreting and seeing on the air. They are protesting vehemently against the token role they are allowed in a medium which has given a monopolistic status to the middle-of-the-road mind.

There are those, today, who would revoke the Fairness Doctrine altogether, on the grounds that it is absurd to have a Government regulation for the express purpose of protecting diversity of expression, if its principal effect is to stifle it. At a recent meeting of the Radio-Television News Directors Association, 60 percent of those present voted that the doctrine had impaired their "editorial integrity." And, according to FCC Chairman Henry, "There are a number of congressmen who would like to see the doctrine abandoned."

One of these irate congressmen, Glenn Cunningham (R., Neb.), a member of the House Communications Subcommittee, questions the legal premise behind the Fairness Doctrine—the Mayflower Decision itself. He says: "The problem of political slanting in one direction stems from something deeper than the Fairness Doctrine. It comes from that regulation which deprives broadcasters of freedom of the press. Until regulation is reduced to the function of an electronic traffic cop, and broadcasters have freedom of the press, broadcasting will never have the political diversity that the other media all have."

This view that broadcasters should have freedom of the press has grown in Congress—but it is not yet a majority position. Many still argue that it is not just the ambiguous Fairness Doctrine which causes the slanting-to-the-middle, but the timid interpretation placed upon it by the network.

And, despite the seriousness of the intellectual dilemma imposed by the doctrine on the networks, there is a certain justice to this claim. A monopolistic middle-of-the-road viewpoint was not legally imposed on the networks by the FCC. The collective huddling around the political center line was a voluntary self-constriction on their part. There always was—and still is—an alternative interpretation of the Fairness Doctrine: proportional representation.

Chairman Henry has this to say: "As far as the Government is concerned we say that the broadcaster should present contrasting viewpoints on issues of public interest. The question of whether an issue is of public interest depends, in part, on the number of people interested in it. Minority views are entitled to proportional representation, so to speak."

"Proportional representation," taken literally, can mean nothing more or less than the "spectrum theory" of broadcasting—a well-established method of presenting a broad range of political positions on the air based on the statistical prevalence of such positions in the country. "The spectrum," says Mr. Henry, is "perfectly permissible under the Fairness Doctrine."

Practically speaking, what would the "spectrum theory" mean?

It would mean this: That the men who staff the news and public-affairs departments would represent all the polar political positions in this country. They would cover and interpret news from these identified points of view, like by-line newspaper reporters and columnists. They would produce documentaries on social and political issues from these different identified points of view.

With the "spectrum" method, the network product would become both politically more realistic and livelier. Newscasts, presented by men with frankly contrasting, rather than implicitly identical, viewpoints, would cease to be blindly repetitive; the art of controversial commentary would be revived; and such phenomena as socialist documentaries on capitalism, labor documentaries on business, laissez-faire documentaries on the welfare state, and conservative documentaries on U.S. foreign policy could appear.

Above all, the "spectrum" method would allow the public to get a glimpse of U.S. political life as it really is, a violently colored dramatic spectrum of conflicting ideas, aspirations and goals—undulled by an artificial middle-of-the-road filter.

The plain fact is that the United States is not ideologically homogenized. And network TV has no business pretending that it is, even in the face of a desperately ambiguous legal situation. If, as we are told, the air waves "belong" to the totality of the American public, there is little excuse for not using the "spectrum theory" of broadcasting.

The Fairness Doctrine is an endless source of torment and confusion to the broadcasting industry and, as such, it merits the condemnation it is increasingly getting. But to the degree that the networks have retreated before the doctrine's ambiguities—to the degree that they have voluntarily rejected the maximum intellectual diversity that was legally possible to them—to the degree that they have placed the crucial realm of political coverage in the hands of an intellectual monopoly—they are responsible for the bitter struggle for air time by major groups that we are seeing today.

The "moderate" interpretation of the Fairness Doctrine has turned the networks into a giant communications system which trudges down the middle of every road, waving the banner of noncommitment. It has produced a strange, soggy tyranny of "medium" opinion on the air waves, prophetically described in the Senate Report on Freedom of Communications: "It is in the quagmire of moderation that intellectual integrity suffers the most."

'Prevailing network opinion is middle-of-the-road. Of course, this middle position isn't no position. It's a position.'
E. William Henry, FCC Chairman

WHAT A BUSINESS!

The new breed of stuntmen are sober, hard-working and well-to-do

Stuntmen today are professionals in the best sense of the word—in contrast to early movie days when stunting was a hit-or-miss proposition and the guy who missed might have to pay his own doctor bills. Nowadays a stuntman takes every precaution when he goes out on a job—both for his own safety and for the success of the “stunt.”

Usually, he will carry along his “stunt bag,” which contains pads for his knees, elbows, hips and back. Then, in overseeing stunt preparations, he may have some ground plowed up, or a sand pit dug, to break his fall. Or, to help with a stunt, he may use a special trampoline device as demonstrated here (upper left) by Burt Reynolds (Quint Asper in Gunsmoke) and stuntman Ron Rondell (on horse).

The trampoline may be used to gain more spring for a jump onto a horse or to some other higher level.

In these pictures, Reynolds (though not a professional stuntman, he often participates in “stunt” action involving his role) and Rondell continued show how to "jump" a rider and topple with a minimum of danger. The horse is specially trained and the fall is made into deep sand. (Picture on preceding page.)

As befits their new efficiency, their $20,000-a-year-or-better incomes, and their status and importance in TV and motion pictures, stuntmen insist on being treated as the professionals they are.

"We're not just a bunch of guys hanging around a bar waiting for someone to call and ask us to fall off a cliff," says stuntman George Robotham, who as a sideline is building two $75,000-$100,000 houses a few blocks from his Beverly Hills home.

Many are successful in areas far removed from their hazardous trade. One owns a restaurant, another operates an air freight line between Los Angeles and Honolulu, one is in the junk business, one is a commercial artist, and two have written scripts for the Westerns in which they fall off horses and cliffs.

The Screen Actors Guild minimum wage for a stuntman is $100 a day. A horse fall—man and horse falling together—may bring $300. According to Robotham, "a man with a good falling horse can make $1000 before lunch." These days, of course, are infrequent.

Robotham himself does not do "horse work." Modern stuntmen are specialists—fights, underwater work, cars, horses. Western stuntman Henry Wills, who was raised on a ranch in Arizona, has three falling horses. He says, "It takes about a year to train a horse to make his left leg and shoulder coordinate, so he'll fall when you want him to."

The price of most stunts depends upon their difficulty and, in the case of novel stunts, upon the individual stuntman's acumen in dickering with the director. According to Wills,

"There are no elaborate stunts on TV—there isn't time." But in the motion picture "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," which used 50 stuntmen, three received $3000 each for one day's work wrecking cars.

Being in such a relatively lofty income bracket, stuntmen resent their popular image as irresponsible daredevils or drunken ne'er-do-wells—an image which derives partly from the early days of stunting and partly from the off-screen activities of part-time movie extras who insist upon calling themselves stuntmen.

"Every guy that ever fell off a chair calls himself a stuntman," says Robotham. Recently in one edition of a Los Angeles newspaper, there were stories concerning a wife beater, a narcotics addict and a man shot in a bar-room brawl. All three were identified as stuntmen, but, says Robotham, "not one of them really was."

Strictly speaking, there are only about 90 real stuntmen—the members of the Stuntmen's Association; and less than half of them make their living entirely by doing stunts. The association, founded in 1961, is primarily fraternal. But, according to its president, former University of Florida All-America Dale Van Sickle, "We also try to improve conditions and police the men. If a man takes a job he isn't capable of or makes a fool of himself, we call him on the carpet."

The senior member of the group is Harvey Parry, in pictures since 1919 and, at 62, still an active stuntman. He acknowledges the difference between the new and the old generations of stuntmen: "They're a different breed nowadays—they're businessmen. The old-timers took more chances, and a lot of times liquor was their pad."

In the old days, Parry says, "We often had to 'steal' shots. If you wanted to show a car crossing in front of a train, you simply drove a car in front of a train." Once, to get a shot of a locomotive whistling, Parry and William Wellman, a stuntman who went on to become a well-known movie director, put on a wrestling match on the railroad track. They were not in the picture, but Parry recalls, "The engineer had to blow that whistle."

A great old-time stuntman was Richard Talmadge, now also a director. Once, after hurting his back doing a stunt, he paid a visit to a movie location on crutches. Despite his condition, the director persuaded him to do a fall from a cliff. Talmadge was supposed to land in a net, but the wind caught him as he fell and he hit the ground instead. Not only was he unhurt, but he insists the impact of the fall cured his ailing back!

Talmadge is probably one of the few stuntmen who ever refused to do a stunt when asked, and got away with it. Back in the silent-picture days, the director of "The Queen of Sheba" asked Talmadge to swing across a great hall on a portiere which was hung in such a way that Talmadge knew the stunt could not be done. The director was so indignant at his refusal that he said, "Give me the wig—I'll do it." In his attempt, he broke his hip, leg, ankle, collarbone and jaw, and "The Queen of Sheba" was finished by another, less daring, director.

Most stuntmen insist that they do not get hurt because, according to George Robotham, "They know what they're doing and they're careful." There are notable exceptions. Bob Morgan, one of the best, lost a leg in "How the West Was Won," when one of the hydraulically operated logs on a lumber car was accidentally activated and swept him off and under the train. Generally, though, stuntmen deprecate their injuries. They say things like, "All I did was crack three ribs and my scapula and have four stitches taken over my eye," or, "I was just out three months."

One of the old-timers, the late Billy Jones, seemed almost indestructible. On location in the desert near Victorville, Cal., he decided to drive into town for an evening of fun and relaxation. On the way into Victorville and on the way back, he overturned his car on the same curve, but he wasn't hurt either time because he rolled under the dash as soon as the car started to turn over.

Jones, a tough veteran, wasn't even scared, just embarrassed for pulling the same dumb trick twice.

Western stuntman Jimmy Van Horn is convinced anything can happen. Playing an Indian, he was supposed to fall from his horse to the ground. He was in mid-air when another horse, from which a stuntman had just fallen, came up beside him. Instead of hitting the ground, Van Horn landed on horse No. 2 and then had to start all over again. It was tough on Jimmy but a bargain for the show's producers, who got the whole stunt for the price of one fall.

FOR THE RECORD

And Then There Were 13: The network masterminds still have a few small gaps to fill in their TV schedules for next season, but they have already decided the fates of most of the current shows. Let's take inventory:

- Last September, 34 new weekly series turned up on the networks' nighttime schedules. Of these, it now appears, 13 will be invited back for a second season. Six of the survivors are ABC shows: The Fugitive, The Patty Duke Show, Burke's Law, The Farmer's Daughter, The Outer Limits and The Jimmy Dean Show. NBC has four: Mr. Novak, The Bill Dana Show, Kraft Suspense Theatre and Bob Hope's anthology series. CBS, which introduced fewer new shows than either of the other two networks, intends to retain three: Petticoat Junction, My Favorite Martian and The Danny Kaye Show.

- Two late starters—ABC's The Hollywood Palace and NBC's That Was the Week That Was, both of which debuted in midseason—are also expected back next September.

- Most conspicuous among the cancellations are four series starring veteran entertainers—Jerry Lewis, Judy Garland, Phil Silvers and Imogene Coca (Grindl). And some highly touted drama vehicles also ran out of gas—The Richard Boone Show, East Side/West Side, The Great Adventure, Arrest and Trial, among others.

- The long list of unrenewed shows also contains a number of long-run series, including The Garry Moore Show, Sing Along with Mitch, Route 66, The Eleventh Hour, Du Pont Show of the Week, 77 Sunset Strip, The Twilight Zone, The Joey Bishop Show and the weekly boxing telecasts.

Dr. Stanton's Proposal: A recent survey revealed that the majority of Americans get most of their news from television. When it comes to legislative and judicial proceedings, however, the public almost always gets its news secondhand—cameras and microphones are not permitted inside legislative chambers or courtrooms, except for certain specially authorized occasions. Many thoughtful citizens believe that this situation requires study and, within prescribed limits, correction. One of these persons is Dr. Frank Stanton, president of CBS. On March 26, in an address to the student body of The Annenberg School of Communications of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Stanton offered some concrete proposals aimed at establishing a national policy to govern the access of all news media to judicial and legislative sessions. CBS, Dr. Stanton announced, has offered the Brookings Institution of Washington, D.C., a grant to cover the costs of an independent study which would define the issues and lay the groundwork for the framing of a "code of fair practices." Dr. Stanton has asked the Brookings people to enlist "a distinguished task force" to conduct the study; he has suggested that Newton Minow, former FCC Chairman, would be a logical choice to head the task force. The Brookings Institution is considering the proposal.—Henry Harding

"WHO KILLED NEIL BROCK?"

"Who Killed Neil Brock?" [TV GUIDE, March 28]. I didn't, nor did most of my neighbors who never miss the show. Phooey on the majority—personally I'm going out first thing in the morning and swat a windmill!

Topsham, Maine

I do agree with Edith Efron that, without compromising their basic position, the producers could have allowed Neil Brock an occasional victory, thus possibly winning over a few more of those viewers who can only take reality in small doses.

Robert D. Phelps, M.D.
Bloomington, Minn.

I would like to compliment Edith Efron on her excellent identification of the Pro Man and the Con Man in our culture.

Hurst, Texas

From a rather unambitious start Edith Efron's article on East Side/West Side degenerates into possibly the most unacceptable and biased piece of petty criticism yet to appear in TV GUIDE. Her flag-waving conclusion bespeaks an intellectual Ku Klux Klanishness which blatantly ignores the strong and reasonable case for neorealism as a dominant theme in American thought.

Clyde F. Holt
New Haven, Conn.

Why all the hullabaloo about East Side/West Side going off the air? It's a terrible program. I saw one the other night about a labor leader that was so ridiculous it made me laugh louder than at any comedy.

Joe Brody
New York, N.Y.

ASK MR. NIELSEN

If Petticoat Junction is so popular, why wasn't it nominated in the TV GUIDE Award's "Favorite New Series" like the allegedly low-rated Richard Boone Show?

Bellingham, Mass.

LIKES THOSE COMMERCIALS

I do not agree with Martin Mayer's "What Can Be Done About Those Commercials" [TV GUIDE, March 14]. I spent three years in Great Britain where the BBC has no commercials. It was very dull. No breaks at all, just one program after another.

Dorothy N. Elder
Victorville, Cal.

SHURE AND BEGORRAI

Shure, the article about Eileen O'Neill ["TV's Prettiest Cop," March 14] wuz as charmin' as the lass herself. Bless Mistire Raddatz' Slavic-Irish heart!

Patricia Rowe
Rochester, N.Y.

5:00- 3 5 12 MASTERS GOLF TOURNAMENT

SPECIAL Action in the final two rounds of the 28th annual Masters Golf Tournament is telecast this weekend from the Augusta (Ga.) National Golf Club. Play in the 72-hole, medal-play event began last Thursday with a field of nearly 100 of the world's best pro and amateur players teeing off at the par-72, 6980-yard course.

Leading contenders for first-place money (about $20,000) and the coveted Masters' green jacket include defending champion Jack Nicklaus, top money-winner on the 1964 tour; three-time Masters winner Arnold Palmer; and 1963 runner-up "Champagne Tony" Lema. Other highly regarded U.S. entrants include Julius Boros, Billy Casper, Mason Rudolph, Paul Harney, Dow Finsterwald and Art Wall. Southpaw Bob Charles and Gary Player head the foreign entries.

Today: the final four holes of the third round. Tomorrow: From 4-5:30 P.M., Chs. 3, 5 and 12, the concluding four holes of the tourney. In case of tie or postponement, there will be a telecast Monday from 5-6 P.M., Ch. 3.

Read the results of laboratory tests of leading floor cleaners on well-known waxes. When tested against a best-selling powder detergent and a best-selling liquid detergent, only Beacon ALLBRANDS WAX REMOVER dissolved away every visible trace of old wax. With ALLBRANDS, dulling stains, even stubborn layers of old, encrusted wax in corners disappear.

■ Just mix ALLBRANDS WAX REMOVER with water and spread it on. Mop it up and floors are sparkling clean. Next time you're ready to re-wax, get your floors 100% clean with ALLBRANDS WAX REMOVER. Look for it in the new can.

THE MARTIAN FROM ACTORS STUDIO

Ray Walston goes far-out to make his character believable; there was, for instance, that midnight call about 'glinkoil'

BY MARIAN DERN

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration may not be interested, but one way to rouse a Martian's ire (not to be confused with his antennae) is to compare him with the Devil. At least it works that way with the only Martian known to inhabit this earth, your favorite and My continued

Favorite Martian, Ray Walston.

Before the CBS series, Walston was best known for his portrayal of another character from regions beyond, the Devil, alias Mr. Applegate, in the stage and screen versions of "Damn Yankees." And more than a flying saucerful of viewers see a great similarity between the rather picaresque Devil and the pixie-ish Martian. But not Walston.

Beware of doing too well

"It's all that ridiculous business of being typed," Walston says with controlled but curling lip. "Why, Applegate was an evil man, even though he did have a brilliant sense of humor. The Martian is kindly, whimsical and basically good. But people like to put you in a mold. Why, in New York I lost a number of parts because of the 'Damn Yankees' role—there's such a thing as doing a part too well, you know."

Yet doing a part very well seems to be a built-in compulsion with Walston. Says one Hollywood director and close personal friend: "Ray can play a gangster, a psycho, an angel or the neighbor next door equally well. He'll work till he does it. He's a complete perfectionist."

Further testimony is given by Jimmy Komack, who has written many of the Martian scripts. "One Sunday night, very late, I get an urgent, emergency message to get in touch with Ray. He says to me, 'What's glinkoil?' And I say, what's what?, and what the devil difference does it make at this hour of the night anyway? It seems Ray was studying my script and one line says something about the flying saucer needing glinkoil and he wanted to know what was glinkoil. Only Ray would insist on knowing that."

ing"—via the theater, starting with one-line roles, understudy assignments, supporting roles, Actors Studio in New York, and finally star parts. "The only way I can make the Martian believable and not just a magician is to absorb the character, to feel it. Then when you have to read lines that were rewritten two minutes before, it comes out perfectly in character."

And "in character" it is. Sometimes it's hard to tell how much is Uncle Martin and how much Ray Walston, but if you were to see this slight, dapper man with a twinkle in his eye and a personal reserve bordering on shyness—if you were to see him zinging down the back hills of Beverly Hills on a bicycle, his hair dyed a Halloween-moon gold and trimmed, for the show, in astronaut John Glenn style, with earphones attached to his head and a small tape recorder in his pocket—you might indeed wonder if he had come from another planet rather than New Orleans, his real home town.

The bike and recorder are not confined to the hills and home. He keeps a bike on the studio set, along with a lot of weightlifting equipment, and pedals to and from dressing room and camera. He records his speeches on the tape in a flat monotone so that he learns the lines without inflection, then can give a reading of them before the camera that will sound fresh and responsive.

One day recently, at the request of a photographer, Walston assembled the six or so recorders he keeps at home into a heap on the living-room floor and remarked wryly, "Now, how's that for a pile of insecurity?"

Despite a long line of stage, screen and TV roles, Walston works himself very hard, as if to triple-guarantee that he will do a good job. In the beginning he wasn't even sure if he should be an actor. In school days in New Orleans he thought he'd like to be a writer. During the Depression Walston had to quit school to work. Someone had told him that working on a newspaper was good experience for a writer, so he got a job as a printer's devil on the New Orleans Item-Tribune for $10 a week.

Later, moving to Houston, he graduated to linotype operator, where "I read all the drama reviews and learned that Margo Jones was directing the Community Players there." Walston was intrigued but afraid to audition, until he read one day that auditions were going to be conducted in private. When he got there, "privacy" turned out to be a whole roomful of ambitious actors, but he read anyway and was given one line—"Hello"—in "High Tor."

For six years it was linotype by day, stage appearances by night. Walston was also helping care for his bedridden mother and living with a married brother. A sister also lived in Houston, but none of the family ever came to see him on stage. "My brother's interest in my acting went only so far as a sarcastic slur or two about my masculinity when I grew long hair for the part of Romeo," Ray remembers with a wince.

But even if the family wasn't aware of it, Walston was on his way. He left Texas in 1943, with a pretty, brown-eyed bride, the former Ruth Calvert, for a role in Tennessee Williams' "You Touched Me" at the Cleveland Playhouse, with Margo Jones directing. Some months later it was Broadway, with an assortment of parts leading up to an award-winning performance in Williams' "Summer and Smoke."

In 1950 it was the road-company tour of "South Pacific," then back to Broadway for "Juliet and Me," followed by the big hit "Damn Yankees." There was a young comic in "Yankees" who sought Ray's advice on acting, and who later turned up as a main writer for My Favorite Martian—Jimmy Komack.

easy show for writers, particularly since no one is quite sure just what a Martian is and isn't—though CBS Program Practices does occasionally send a script back with the notation: "A Martian wouldn't say that."

From Walston's point of view, the fact that the show is a solid success means that "We now have the luxury to experiment, to make it even better." This would seem quite logical except for the fact that networks usually figure that if a show's a success, heaven forbid that it should be fiddled with. It must indeed be difficult to be a network, confronted with such a crisis as occurred recently when one line in a Komack script had a character say, "I don't any more believe in little green men from Mars than I do in Santa Claus." A few days later Komack got a hurried call from CBS. A group of executives had just held a conference and, says Komack, "It was CBS's official position that there is a Santa Claus and what's more, one of the executives was reported to have confessed that he believed in Santa Claus till the age of 10—and no one wanted to offend any little watchers." Out! said CBS.

One avid little watcher is Walston's 10-year-old daughter Kate, who has shown some talent of her own, and whom papa has encouraged to take drama lessons. "I wouldn't want her to take a big role she wasn't ready for—she'll have to spend a lot of time training," says Ray sensibly. "But then wouldn't it be fun to have a script on 'Daughter of My Favorite Martian'?" he adds with a grin.

Ray's wife Ruth had minor acting ambitions but was "glad to give them up—one talent is enough, especially one like Ray's." She very much enjoys decorating their pleasant, medium-size home, which is furnished attractively but not lavishly in bright modern colors. The house and small pool sit on a high hill behind Beverly Hills, in an area which still boasts more wild flowers than homes.

True, there are a number of bare hilltops from which a flying saucer could easily be launched, but so far Ray Walston has shown little desire to leave this planet. After all, there are many satisfactions in being a Good Martian. "The most rewarding letter I ever got," Ray reminisces, "was from a third-grade girl who said that she could now sleep at night because she knew that, instead of horrible monsters, nice people came from the vast, scary reaches of space."

And what does Ray tell all the children who write him asking about life on Mars? There is a faraway look in the light-blue Walston eyes. . . . "Naturally I tell them about it—the trees are pink, you know. And when the boats go up through our canals there, why the spray mist makes enormous rainbows."

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

Chronicle

Chron'-i-cle, as it is irritatingly spelled on your TV screen, is the CBS Public Affairs Department entry which alternates each Wednesday with the CBS News entry—CBS Reports. It is, as it introduces itself, "a collection of random entries on the arts and sciences, some items from the long list of human achievements and human failures, it all being a record of interesting people, places and events and some notes on the human condition, past and present."

The above quote, which is accompanied by some remarkable graphics, including a self-portrait of Leonardo da Vinci, contains itself a certain amount of human hokum. Certainly Chronicle is no record. But whatever it is, it is worth your attention. Artistic but not artsy, it is also, like a good teacher, not teachy. Even when you are not interested in the subject, you are likely to find yourself so fascinated by the treatment that, before you know it, you are interested. Some time ago, for example, the show gave us "Tomorrow Was Yesterday"—a report on five major scientific breakthroughs. Here the show was long and at times tedious, but the treatment was remarkable. Credit not only executive producer Richard Siemanowski and announcer Charles Collingwood

(who, incidentally, cannot only *an'-*nounce but *pro'-*nounce too) but also the remarkably effective special-effector Paul Wittlig.

For another and entirely different kind of Chronicle, take "Four Views of Caesar." This time Mr. Siemanowski took the words of four men: Caesar himself, who saw himself as not only just, but also just about perfect; Plutarch, who saw Caesar as the man who would be king ("The fool," replies Caesar, "I was king"); Shakespeare, who saw Caesar as a pompous tyrant ("a stuffed toga") and finally George Bernard Shaw, who saw him as a wise and disenchanted old man (Shaw's Cleopatra, when asked how she was sure Caesar didn't love her, replied, "Because I cannot make him jealous"). Altogether, the forum of the four Caesars—played in order by Peter Donat, Martin Gabel, Alan Badel and Dennis King—rendered unto Caesar a fine show.

For still a third kind of Chronicle, take "American Tap Roots: Finkley, Dickey and Merry." This was the story of three real people, unknowns—Mrs. Finkley, the daughter of a slave; Mr. Dickey, a Kansas wheat farmer; and Mr. Merry, a Massachusetts trolley-car conductor—none of whom has any connection with each other except they all are in their 80's. Unprepossessing as it all sounded at the outset (even Collingwood's explanation that "for all their dissimilarities, there is a kind of historical similarity to them"), it made at the end as unforgettable a show as Mr. Merry's own simple words—when he told of how much he loved his wife and what it was like when, 50 years ago, he had to go back to his home and tell his eight children of her death. "It took me two hours to get from here as far as that cattle cart," he said, "and to this day the feeling's still here" a matching kerchief for Suzy's wedding (she's Mrs. Bradford Dillman). Dress can be sashed or not, and in silk it's $90. Her enamel-and-diamond bracelets and pins are by David Webb. continued

Right: Look familiar? Suzy in the fisherman's shirt that started the whole wonderful look . . . in beige Irish linen and lace. The price, about $80. Marvelous for the beach, just long enough to cover her pink cotton Bikini, as shown here . . . or over pants or long evening skirt. All Suzy's coiffures, from this casual one to the elegant one across the page, are by Enrico Caruso, New York.

CHORUS-LINE GRADUATE, CUM LAUDE

Joanne Linville
is enjoying the rewards of years spent learning the acting game

One would never think, to look at dignified, solid, serious dramatic actress Joanne Linville, that she was once one of the bounciest chorines in Las Vegas. She is imposing enough to impress the men who cast the Dr. Kildare and Ben Casey shows, which she has worked in recent years, and the stars thereof, Dick Chamberlain and Vince Edwards.

"Dick is an angel," she says. "I connected with him. And so is Vince. He thought I might be one of those stuffy New York actresses—until he learned I had been in the line at Vegas."

At a casually admitted 36, Miss Linville today looks more like a New York actress than either a Las Vegas dancer or a Hollywood guest star. Her hair is its own color (rich dark brown) and seems to get combed as an afterthought. Her smile is tentative, as though not quite sure of its welcome, and her car is a plebian Volkswagen, a status symbol ranking in Hollywood just one notch above a public admission of bankruptcy.

With Miss Linville, however, the Volkswagen is neither reverse snobbery nor an economic symptom. It is merely a means of transportation. Joanne is a level-headed young woman, in spite of a somewhat nervous intensity which wears off only after she has assured herself that her immediate surroundings won't bite. She prefers book-lined walls to modern art and is so convinced that her husband's career must come first, she almost stamps her foot when mentioning it.

This in itself seems almost a contradiction of the fact that she is not only an actress but a dedicated one. "I am an independent actress," she says, by which she means she is capable of depending upon herself rather than upon the director. Yet at 34, at a time when the dedicated stage actress is just arriving at her fullest flower, Joanne elected to get married (to Mark Rydell, director and actor who played Jeff Baker for six years in As the World Turns), to have a baby (Christopher, born five months ago), and to turn down all acting offers in order to "connect" with the whole experience. Only now is she beginning to come back under full steam.

Joanne grew up in Long Beach, Cal. She started dancing and walking at about the same age. After two years at Compton Junior College, she landed a role as a dance hall girl in a Paramount Western called "Copper Canyon." The experience convinced her that she should learn something about acting, a decision which took her to New York and five years of study with Stella Adler—paid for by dancing jobs.

Her dramatic TV debut came in 1956, in a Studio One episode. Within a year she was playing leads. She has since appeared at least once in most of TV's major shows. There was a time during the 1962-63 season when one could hardly turn on the set without seeing Miss Linville.

Talent agent Monique James was the main force for Joanne's development. "I first saw her," she says, "in an off-Broadway revival of 'Johnny Johnson.' She was on-stage for only five minutes, but she stopped the show. She was uproariously funny. Since then, oddly enough, she's done almost nothing but highly emotional things, at which she is very good. She has great flair and style, great range. I know it's a cliché to say that someone is a major talent, but Joanne truly is."

Joanne at the moment speaks wistfully of New York but is at the same time obviously proud of the success her husband is beginning to make in Hollywood as a director (he has done nine Ben Caseys this season). She longs to do comedy, yet seems almost resigned to the long-suffering-woman role she has played so often.

"It is difficult to learn how to be simple," she once remarked. She was talking about acting at the time, but she might just as easily have been talking about herself.

Bob Hope going over script with producer Dick Berg.

'DICK—PLEASE BE GOOD, SO I CAN BOW'

The remarkable Bob Hope, at 60, is on the air every week—and he insists on a 'Tiffany' show

Five years ago an uncharacteristically serious Bob Hope said, "I've learned my lesson." He had just finished recuperating from the effects of a blood clot which had formed behind his left eye in December 1958 while he was touring Europe entertaining GIs. His doctors had told him to curtail his activities, and the comedian said that, although he would never retire, he intended to take it easy from then on.

What the doctors failed to realize—and Hope, too, because he had never tried it before—was that he is constitutionally incapable of taking it easy. Thus today, an amazingly youthful 60, he seems to be busier than ever. For the first time, he is on television every week, either as host of the drama series that carries his name or starring in his own comedy specials on NBC. And when the eye trouble flared up again last December, as he was preparing to head for the Middle East on his annual Christmas tour of U.S. military installations, he was "quite nervous," not because of his eye per se, an associate says, but "because they might not let him go."

He did go, of course. Bing Crosby and Jack Benny filled in for him on a comedy special and James Stewart acted as host on a couple of drama programs, but Hope made his GI tour. Except during the shows, he wore dark glasses with pinholes to see through, after an intensive series of heat treatments of the eye, which he dismissed lightly with the offhand comment, "They barbecued me."

Because of the delay, it was necessary to telescope the already tight schedule of shows, and the Christmas tour, according to someone who has been on all of them, was "one of the roughest we've ever had." Hope, although he tended to tire more easily than in the past, seemed to enjoy every minute of it. And it apparently agreed with him. When he returned home, he did not have to go back into the hospital for more treatments, as anticipated, and the doctors let him play golf for the first time in many weeks.

"What really gets me down," he says, "is when I can't get out and swing at that ball." Now, a friend says, "He's slicing farther than ever. I don't think he has slowed down at all."

Aldous Huxley once wrote: "The characteristic creations of pure comedy, as well as of pure tragedy, are really not human beings at all [but] creatures of fable, larger than life, as befits mythological beings; and living, not with the everyday life of men, but more intensely." The writer was speaking of fictional comic characters, but his words apply as well to Hope. As Hope's agent James L. Saphier puts it: "Bob has a source of adrenalin the rest of us don't know about."

Thus, last year when Saphier suggested that Hope do a weekly series, the idea immediately appealed to him: "After 13 years on TV, I figured it would be a stirring of the brains." But, unlike the brash Hope public image, he tends to deprecate his own role in the dramatic program. He says, "I just do the lead-ins"; and he has inscribed a picture of himself which hangs in the office of Dick Berg, producer of the drama offerings: "Dick—Please be good, so I can bow."

Berg insists upon Hope's importance in the drama series: "Nothing with Hope's name on it gets his inattention—he wants a Tiffany show." He tells of the lengthy conferences he has with Hope between shows and how Hope has suggested stories (like "It's Mental Work," by John O'Hara, the author's first work to be performed on television; Rod Serling adapted) and writers (like Budd Schulberg, who has done his first original story for television).

In show-business parlance, Bob Hope is usually thought of as a "single," although over the years he has worked with such partners as Bing Crosby and Jerry Colonna. Never, however, has he worked with the likes of Dick Berg, a gangling, rumpled man with a Dr. Zorba hair-do and baggy, bloodhound eyes, who looks more like a comedian than Hope does. But Berg is deadly serious and mightily driven. He says, "I want to be the best producer in the business." And he appreciates the value of Bob Hope's name in helping him achieve this.

musical comedy and radio, Berg was studying at Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa., and at Harvard, where he was president of a drama society called Mustard and Cheese.

Berg scored in TV by writing dramas for Studio One and Playhouse 90 and by creating the Johnny Staccato series and producing many of the Checkmate programs.

The unlikely combination of these two men came about, strangely enough, because of the latter-day proliferation of TV commercials. Saphier, Hope's agent, says, "I was looking for single sponsorship—that's the way a sponsor gets maximum value out of Hope." Chrysler's advertising agency was interested, but wanted a weekly show. Eventually a season's schedule was set up which involved four sets of shows and numerous corporate entities, plus a couple of program titles that could only happen in TV.

First of all, there are 22 dramas of Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theatre. These are serious in nature and produced by Dick Berg for Revue Productions. Then there are eight programs called Chrysler Presents a Bob Hope Comedy Special. Six of these are traditional Hope variety shows, including this week's program which features the fifth annual TV Guide Awards presentations. The other two comedy specials are "book" shows in which Hope stars. Finally, there are four Chrysler Theatre comedies in which Hope does not appear, although one is a spin-off for a new TV series based on an old Hope movie, "The Seven Little Foys." These filmed comedies will be shot at Revue but will not be produced by Berg or Revue, but by one of Hope's own companies, of which four are involved in all this.

And if all this sounds confusing, the money isn't. The cost of the whole series is reportedly a simple, round, uncomplicated $15,000,000.

Although Hope himself was pessimistic about the popularity of the dramatic program ("I thought we'd take a licking in the ratings"), Chrysler Theatre has done well against its Friday night competition. Route 66 is slated to be dropped, and Hope and Berg usually outstrip the star-studded Burke's Law. Berg says, "Even in our failures, we will have made an attempt and we will have been good. If we can get quality back on the air, maybe we'll spawn a whole new generation of Serlings and Chayefskys."

A former Cleveland who has known Hope a long time says, "Ever since Bob said good-bye to the boys in the poolroom at 105th and Euclid, he has always looked for one thing—class." He believes he has found it in Chrysler Theatre and in Dick Berg. As for Berg's opinion of Hope, he says what everybody from GIs to Presidents has known for a long time: "He's a classy guy."

TV TELETYPE: NEW YORK: BOB STAHL REPORTS:

Hallmark Hall of Fame will dramatize the lives of FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE and NAPOLEON next season on NBC. Executive producer GEORGE SCHAEFER wants JULIE HARRIS to portray the famed British founder of modern nursing. SCHAEFER will probably tape two of his six projected specials in August, as a head start on the season.

New CBS News president FRED W. FRIENDLY told CBS station managers he wants EDWARD R. MURROW, now recuperating from a lung operation in California, back on the CBS News team as soon as possible. MURROW and FRIENDLY, of course, are long-time friends and co-workers . . . NBC expands colorcasting another step beginning June 29 when it schedules the daytime Say When regularly in color.

E. G. MARSHALL of The Defenders will do a little moonlighting as host of International Hour, televised on the five CBS-owned stations and eight educational stations. It's a good-will "swap" program with Canada, Australia, Japan, Italy, Argentina and, tentatively, France. MARSHALL will work for the actors' minimum fee . . . British star EMLYN WILLIAMS guests on The Defenders in May in an episode titled "Mind over Murder."

Actor VAN HEFLIN hosts Bell Telephone Hour May 5 . . . LUCILLE BALL's decision to return next season has prompted CBS to shift its Monday night schedule. ANDY GRIFFITH now takes LUCY's 8:30 (ET) spot, with LUCY at 9 and the new Many Happy Returns set for 9:30. Slattery's People, starring RICHARD CRENNNA, is at 10.

NBC's Mr. Novak faculty returns intact next fall, with the exception of STEVE FRANKEN. He leaves for NBC's new 90 Bristol Court. Mr. Novak filming for this season winds up this month with an episode called "Senior Prom." Stars JAMES FRANCISCUS, DEAN JAGGER, JEANNE BAL, et al., resume production for next season in June.

MARIA LITTLE, story editor on Lassie, moves over to Flipper, the series about two boys and their pet dolphin which is scheduled for NBC next season. Packager will be IVAN TORS, formerly of Sea Hunt . . . The New Christy Minstrels, absent from The Andy Williams Show this season, may be back with ANDY next fall . . . VERA MILES, BARBARA RUSH, SCOTT MARLOWE and SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE guest on The Outer Limits May 4 in a story titled "The Forms of Things Unknown" . . . NEVILLE BRAND stars on Twilight Zone May 1 in "The Encounter." He'll be an ex-Marine who finds an enchanted samurai sword among his war mementos.

BILL DANA headlines the show at Atlantic City Steel Pier during the Democratic Convention . . . GARY MERRILL and CHESTER MORRIS co-star on CBS's new Suspense May 13 in "I, the Hunter," and a pretty egotistical series it is. The following week has RALPH MEEKER and J. PAT O'MALLEY in "I, Lloyd Denison."
